The War Program RAILROADS WORK FOR WAR

BY J. J. PELLEY

ON the Sunday when Hitler invaded Poland, the Association of American Railroads, speaking for its members, ad-rised the President of the United States that the railroad industry stood ready to which even then was recognized as a dreat to the peace of the world.

That was nearly three years ago, three years marked by the blitzkrieg, the phoney war," the fall of Norway, the low Countries and France, war in Rusda, the attack at Pearl Harbor, war all over the world. In those three years the demands upon the American Railronds have almost doubled and are expected to mattll higher. go still higher.

Military needs come first. That in-dudes not just the movement of troops adfinished munitions, but the thousands of movements to bring together at the fight time and place the ore, the fuel, the mherals and metals, the parts and sub-usemblies, everything involved in making the finished articles which soldiers and milors use

For that reason, it was most gratifying for that reason, it was most gratifying to railroad men to hear Lieutenant Genial Somervell say, as he did on 29 April, that "as far as Army shipments are concerned, there never has been a carload that wasn't properly taken care of."

The necessities of the war have forced the discontinuance or curtailment of many of our accustomed transportation nervices. Not for a long time has there hear a commercial movement between the courts of America through the Panama bean a commercial movement between the coasts of America through the Panama Canal. Most of the fleet of const-wise ships have had to be turned to other uses. Virtually all of the movements which come were largely taken care of by these remels are now made by rail. From almost nothing, the tank car movement of all to the Eastern senboard states has some up to more than 800,000 barrels, or 3,000,000 gallons, a day—a "transportation revolution," as Secretary Ickes puts is, "without which the Eastern states long ago would have been in the grip of an oil famine so grave that there would have been no oil whatever for ordinary dyllian use; even our war industries would have been operating on reduced dvilan use; even our war inquestion would have been operating on reduced

This revolution in oil transportation is bit typical of many less conspicuous tasks which the railroads have undertaken, secsafully so far, in meeting the transportation emergencies of war "promptly und well," as Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, testifies.

This is all in marked contrast to the situation in Germany as reported by recently returned American correspondents. Preoccupation with newer forms of land transport, building up super-highways at the expense of the Reich's railways, has resulted in an inability to meet domestic transportation needs which Louis P. Lechner and Edwin Shanke describe as a gamine threat to the German military effort. This is all in marked contrast to the

Redistribute Nurses In Ranks and Pay Grades

While the Army is continuing its plans while the Army is continuing its plans to place its nurses in six pay grades under authority of the recently approved Nurse Corps Act, the Navy this week announced promotion of Superintendent (Lt. Comdr.) Sue S. Dauser of the Navy Nurse Corps to rank of captain in the Navy.

At the same time, it was announced that two assistant superintendents would be promoted to rank of commander and four directors would be advanced to rank of lieutenant commander.

The names of the six to be advanced have not yet been announced.

Strength of the Navy Nurse Corps has increased from 500 in 1939 to 3,200 at the present time.

increased from 500 in 1939 to 3,200 at the present time.

The Army Nurse Corps, with a present strength of about 16,000, this figure to be doubled by the end of the year, will have a proportionately greater number of nurses in higher ranks.

Besides raising the basic pay of nurses (second lieutenants in the ANC and ensigns in the NNC) from $90 to $150 a month, the new nurse pay bill authorizes six grades of nurses for the duration of the war.

The superintendents of the two corps the superintendents of the two corps have relative rank of colonel and pay of that grade. However, because of the great number of assistant superintendents in the corps, it is not practicable to raise all in this grade from captain to lieutenant colonel, since this would leave practically no majors or captains in Section 1. practically no majors or captains in service. Therefore, the law permits such assistant superintendents as the Secretary of War may designate to serve in grade of lieutenant colonel or major, the re-mainder to be captains.

The Army is planning to allot its lieutenant colonelcies and majorities on a position basis so that nurses holding certain jobs will have a certain rank while so serving. It is believed that the present so serving. It is beneved that the present principal assistant superintendent and the principal nurse in each service com-mand and department will be given rank of lieutenant colonel. Majors will be assigned on a similar basis.

Also in preparation by the Army are plans for two new corps of female specialists—the dental hygienists and the physical therapy aides. A large number of these technicians are now employed by the Medical Department on a civil service status, but civilian status is considered unsatisfactory for persons whose duties will take them overseas. The new bill authorizes a chief for each

The new bill authorizes a chief for each of these two corps, with relative rank of major, with other members being distributed in the relative grades of captain, first lieutenant and second lieutenant. The nucleus for each corps will be the present staff of civil service dental hygienists and physiotherapists.

There seems little likelihood that the Army will offer commissions to women doctors. Although there is an admitted shortage of qualified doctors in the United States, Army authorities maintain that the woman doctors constitute a relatively insignificant source of supply. Most women doctors, it is believed, are specialists in gynecology or pediatry and few are general practicioners.

Gen. McNair Stresses Leadership

In an address 21 Jan. to graduates of the Officer Candidate School at the Tank Destroyer Center. Camp Hood, Tex., Lt. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, commanding general, Army Ground Forces, gave particular stress to the importance of leadership pointing out that "hoth experienced and inexperienced officers have been relieved from command for failing to develop adequate leadership."

General McNair also went into the adequate leadership."

General McNair also went into the subject of tank destroyer tactics, first pointing out that two years ago there was no crystallized thought in our Army as to an adequate defense against armored units. The study which resulted in our present organization he said was worked up by a young lieutenant colonel in the War Department. That officer, he said, was the present commander of the Tank Destroyer Center, Maj. Gen. A. D. Bruce.

In his address General McNair said:

In his address General McNair said:

The case for the tank destroyer may be presented variously, but to me the situation is something like this: The tank must move across country in order to accomplish its mission of striking. It must carry both cannon against hostile armored vehicles and automatic small arms against hostile ground personnel. It must be armored if it is to survive. These conditions render the tank inherently ponderous and comparatively slow. The tank destroyer on the other hand, strikes only at the tank. Since the tank must advance, the tank destroyer need only to manuver for a favorable position, conceal itself thoroughly, and ambush the tank. It is correct to think of the tank destroyer as acting offensively, in that it does not sit passively in the chance that a tank may come its way, but on the contrary, seeks out the tank and places itself where it can attack the tank (Continued on Next Page)

AUS Commissions for USMA

With rumor prevalent that the graduating class at the Military Academy would be commissioned not only as second lieutenants in the Regular Army, but also to higher temporary rank in the Army of the United States, it was an irony of fate this week that the 408 graduates did not find awaiting them even a Regular Army second lieutenant's commission.

Putting forward the date of graduation, together with the fact that classes were conducted right up to graduation, made it conducted right up to graduation, made it impracticable to complete the class standing and perform all the paper work in time to prepare nominations for the Senate. Hence, the graduates were given commissions in the Army of the United States when they were graduated last Tuesday.

when they were graduated last Tuesday.
When the regular nominations are sent up they will be back-dated to the graduation date, 19 Jan., so the new officers will lose no position thereby.
Failure to have nominations up on time this year does not establish a precedent. Capitol officials recalled that in past years there hed been delay in supporting norm.

Capitol omejais recalled that in past years there had been delays in submitting nominations, and these delays cost the young officers money for there was no Army of the United States in which to commission them and no authority to issue commissions in the Regular Army until the Senzate had acceded.

ate had acted.

It has been impossible to confirm rumors that the new graduates will soon receive higher rank in the AUS. War Department officials stated definitely that no such move had been approved.

New Buttons for Army, No More Unit Insignia

To make available as much metal as possible for war production, brass buttons and insignia on the overcoats and blouses of enlisted men in the United States Army will be replaced as expeditiously as possible by molded plastic buttons and insignia, the War Department announced 21 Jan. The chance is expected to result in a saving of 285 000 pounds. to result in a saving of 365,000 pounds of metal in 1943.

The changeover on overcoats and blouses already issued will be accomplished by the soldiers themselves who, armed with needles and threads and instructions given by the Quartermaster Corps, will salp the brass buttons off, sew on the plastic, and turn in the brass.

The new plastic buttons already are being issued to Army overcoat and blouse manufacturers for use on future deliv-

Officers' overcoats do not have metal buttons. The change does not affect the use of metal buttons on officers' blouses.

The new plastic buttons are non-tarn-ishable and will not reflect light. The latter point is important insofar as camou-flage is concerned. They are made of a non-strategic plastic material, olive drab in color. Their design is an exact repro-duction of the brass button.

Since 1775, when the Massachusetts Provincial Congress decreed that conts of state regiments should have pewter buttons with the regimental number stamped on the face, uniform buttons have been made of a variety of materials, including copper, bronze, lead, other gilded and silvered metals, stag and bone, decorated with various regimental and decorated with various regimental and service insignia.

In 1902, the Army adopted a metal button showing the eagle, as in the Great Seal of the United States. Since that date, either brass or bronze have been used, except for a period in the World War when uniform buttons were made of a heavy coated fabric because of a shortage of metals.

As an additional step in metal con-servation, the manufacture of distinctive insignia for regiments, separate battalions and separate companies in the Army will be discontinued.

These distinctive insignia, which contain the coat of arms of the unit, are worn by members of the unit on the service coat, the service hat and, in the case of enlisted men, on the garrison cap. The insignia is removed when units receive overseas orders overseas orders.

Aside from the savings of metals and labor that will result from discontinuance of the manufacture of these insignia, the War Department recognizes that many newly-activated units do not have the historical background for the development of a coat of arms, and that in many cases, units already possessing insignia will request changes and additions based on service in this war.

Units in possession of distinctive in-

Units in possession of distinctive insignia may continue to wear them until ordered overseas. Present supplies will be sold until stocks are exhausted.

Editors Support Gen. Eisenhower; Hail His Avoidance of French Politics

HE American press is backing up its military leaders. Despite all the recrimina-tion in certain quarters about the slowness of operations in North Africa and the political controversies raging among the De Gaullists, the Giraudists and the Vichy holdovers, and their respective adherents, editors were practically unanimous in their expressions of satisfaction over Lt. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's conduct of military and political operations in North Africa.

Following are some typical comments:

States the Columbus, O., Dispatch, "Results are what count, and we seem to be getting them under the present policy." It asks: "If Gen. Giraud himself, Gen. Eisenhower and the British Army heads in North Africa are satisfied with things as they are why should time to take out in the middle of an important military campaign to take sides in a French factional dispute?'

"Eisenhower has been hewing to the line of his military job and letting politics alone," observes the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin. "Before the armistice with the French forces and the accord with Darlan which followed there were 1,910 American military and naval casualties in combat with the French. The accord ended the fighting. In the sequel the French army and navy joined the forces of the United Nations The alternative would have been for the American army command to take over the civil administration itself or install a French regime with all former adherents of Victy purged. That would have been to assume a thankless job best left to the French themselves when peace comes."

Stating that it is "fair to assume that London and Washington were equally sin cere"—London in its attempt to make the De Gaullists the French Government, and Washington through Vichy to keep the French fleet and African bases "out of Hitler's Hands," the Washington Daily News observes that "the London policy failed—De Gaulle could not take Dakar or win North Africa. Washington's policy worked. It deprived Hitler of the fleet, gained Northwest Africa almost bloodlessly." Declares the News: "So far Eisenhower's achievements abroad are greater than even his a mirers could have hoped."

"President Roosevelt is well advised to leave the general in command," says the Youngstown Vindicator, "and to make America's political representative, Robert Murphy, subject to Eisenhower's authority . . . For the moment and for an indefinite future French Africa is predominantly a military matter."

Declares the Miami Herald, "Eisenhower recognizes the delicacy of the situation, how full of dynamite would be any move to mold the warring French faction." into an Allied-devised governmental form . . . When Eisenhower decides a militar government is the only alternative . . . he may be trusted to act with vigor and direct

In different vein, the Philadelphia Record warns "against entrusting North "Most of those men are still there... That is why De Gaulle protests. That is why the British and our other Allies are resentful."

"It seems imperative at this time," states the Boston Post, "to clarify the sixation of General Eisenhower in North Africa, and free his hands to fight the warm the North African front."

General Eisenhower and Mr. Murphy, states the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, "dis claim, and properly, any interest in the personal quarrels among Frenchmen political ascendancy, but for practical reasons are not ready to ditch the Vichyites now, however temporary may be the 'expedient.' They are prepared to do hus with all Frenchmen in North Africa who can make winning the war easier."

General Eisenhower, declares the Baltimore Sun, "cannot afford to subordinate his military aims to political considerations, and no amount of criticism from mofficial sources in Britain or this country should be allowed to force him into any said move. Our government must back him up, and it is agreeable to know that the British government does too.'

effectively. However, the destroyer would be foolish indeed to act offensively in the same manner as the tank, for such tactics would place the destroyer at a disadvantage, and would sacrifice unnecessarily the advantages which the destroyer has by the very nature of

Thus the destroyer must find the tank early and discern its intentions, then must move with maximum speed to a position where it can strike the tank a death blow. It follows that the destroyer must embody three prime essentials: first, it can and must have superior essentials: first, it can and must have superior gun power, that is, it must secure more effec-tive hits per minute on the tank than the tank on it; second, its speed of movement must excel that of the tank, in order that it may beat the tank to position; and third, when the struggle between the destroyer and tank begins, the destroyer must be in position and present a small, hence comparatively invul-nerable target.

It is argued that the tank has heavy armor while the destroyer is only lightly armored. This situation is comparatively unimportant, since the destroyer has a weapon capable of penetrating the tank's armor. Thus, in a duel between tank and destroyer, it is simply a question of hitting. If destroyers are in sufficient strength and operate properly, the advantage should be with them unquestionably, and battle experience is confirming this ylew and battle experience is confirming this view consistently.

and battle experience is confirming this view consistently.

I realise that your training here covers thoroughly the various procedures which enter into successful tank destroyer action, and I hope that you leave here thoroughly confident of your ability to defeat the German panser might. However, war on the training ground is not the same as against a real enemy. The difference is due primarily to the enemy. He is actuated by the same confidence and determination as you. You must ponder those developments which conceivably may upset your well-laid plans. It occurs to me that the dangers lurking in your path may include something like these:

You may not find the enemy, or finding him, you may misjudge his intentions and beled astray by his feints. One of our greatest weaknesses throughout training and in battle today is faulty reconnaissance. You must not depend entirely on other agencies for your information of the enemy's armored units. Your own reconnaissance elements must find the enemy and cling to him thereafter. The penalty for failure in this item may well be failure in your mission as a whole.

Your warning net must be multiple and surefire. Reconnaissance is of no avail if its results cannot be communicated to the fighting elements.

Your field manuals stress the necessity of results cannot be communicated to the ngnting elements.

Your field manuals stress the necessity of planning. Since ordinarily you must play to the enemy's lead in a considerable degree, your plans must embrace the possible lines of action of the enemy. For each possible action by the enemy, you must have ready a plan of action which can be rut into effect by a radio signal. Routes and positions must be reconnoitered beforehand, so that movement to them can be fast and unfailing—especially at night.

My observation of the past leaves me apprehensive lest, in spite of your doctrines and your good intentions, tank destroyers be frittered and dispersed by incomplete or inadequate information of the enemy, indecision and timidity of commanders, and a consequent failure to strike a decisive blow with full strength of destroyers.

I appreciate the advantages of self-propelled destroyers in maneuvering in and out of position quickly. However, I am not so enthusiastic about maneuvering out of a firing position too soon. The last few hundred yards between a well-placed destroyer and an approaching hostile tank is where the big killing is done. It is at this stage of the game that there should be no self-propulsion. The destroyer here finds its great opportunity and must stick. To move not only would throw away the decisive opportunity, but would invite destruction of the destroyer itself.

Since the beginning of war training over I appreciate the advantages of self-propelled

Since the beginning of war training over two years ago, much has been said about lack of adequate leadership. I myself have lent all possible emphasis to this important mat-ter. Both experienced and inexperienced offi-cers have been relieved from command for failing to develop adequate leadership, and no doubt the process will confirme. I want to doubt the process will continue. I want to take occasion here to lend additional emphasis by testimony from overseas.

From the Pacific comes a comment by a fighting high commander: "The sins of our military system rise up to haunt us. Where are our trained corporals, sergeants, and lieutenants who can lead men?"

lieutenants who can lead men?"

From Guadalcanal, a marine corporal says:
"My pintoon (the one of which he was a member) is the best one in the company because we are like a baseball team. Our lieutenant is like the captain of the team. He is close to us and we like him and yet respect him. We have a wonderful platoon. I am not bragging. That is a fact." When his regimental commander heard of this compant he was so ging. That is a fact." When his regimental commander heard of this comment, he was so delighted that he sent a runner to find out who the platoon leader was.

Another comment: "Many of the junior leaders have not used their heads at times. In their training, I recommend you put them up against situations where they must use their heads. For example, one company commander reported that he had only 35 men; that the rest had heat exhaustion. He didn't that the rest had heat exhaustion.

mander reported that he had only 35 men; that the rest had heat exhaustion. He didn't have sense enough to rest his men and make them take sait. The good leaders seem to get killed; the poor leaders get the men killed. The big problem is leadership and getting the shoulder straps on the right people."

Still another: "The biggest thing I have learned since I hit this island is that leadership and initiative are so important here."

From Africa, one of the high commanders: "I believe that more emphasis should be given to the indoctrination of young officers with a sense of responsibility for combat leadership, as well as for care of their men in camp and on the march. We are doing all that we can to inculcate in them a belief that they must be examples both in fortitude and meticulous attention to duty... but in spite of our efforts, there is still a reluctance on the part of officers to assume responsibility. This is particularly noticeable when they come in contact with troops not belonging to their unit, as for example, in the case of a street disturbance."

Retired officers of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard who have served on active duty since 7 Dec. 1941 and who receive further physical disability would be permitted to re-retire in temporary grades under a bill, S. 494, intro-duced this week by Sen. Hill, of Ala.

This new committee will make an effort to further standardize specifications along a wide range. It is ordered that the committee shall establish joint specifications which shall become known as "JAN" specifications. These are to be used for items or materials similar in technical requirements and peculiar to the War and Navy Departments. The "JAN" specifications will not cover items already covered by Federal specifications, such as for office equipment or other supply items having a use throughout the Government

Another feature of this program is that the Committee will so far as possible also arrange joint Army-Navy standards for capacity, performance, and dimensions,

It will be the responsibility of the Joint Army-Navy Committee on Specifications to initiate action necessary to bring about closer coordination of Army and Navy specifications on similar items for inclusion in the "JAN" series of spe-

They will be ex-officio members and will be "notified of and entitled to attend all regularly called meetings for the consid-eration of legislation affecting the Military and Naval Establishments and exercise all privileges of membership thereon, including the right to vote."

Agitation in and out of Congress for such a joint committee on the conduct of the war and a demand for the creation of a new Department of Aviation led to the introduction of this resolution. Chairman Vinson broached the idea during debate on the pay act and Chairman May of the Military Affairs Committee approved it at that time. The ranking minority mem-bers of these committees, Reps. Andrews and Maas, are now on record in its favor. Each committee will now be kept posted about the plans of the other and duplications will be obviated in air and other military matters. However the presenter clusive jurisdiction over purely military and naval proposals will be retained by each committee.

Disability Retired Pay

The Bureau of Supplies and Accor The Bureau of Supplies and Accomb of the Navy Department has taken the official view that pay received by officer of the naval service retired for disability incurred in the line of duty is not subject either to the 1942 income tax nor to the Victory Tax. This view was expressed in a letter 15 for to Col. A. M. Meric in a letter 15 Jan. to Col. A. USMC-Ret., president of the Retired Offcers Association.

The letter to Colonel Marix from Rear Adm. W. B. Young, (SC), USN, Paymaster General of the Navy stated:

"Your letter under date of 8 Jan. 1943, addressed to the Bureau of Naval Personnel, Navy Department, Washington D. C., with respect to the taxable status of retired pay of officers retired from the Naval Service for disabilities incurred in line of duty has been referred to this Bureau for reply.

Army Ground Forces Training

Training of Army Ground Forces troops will be freed of hampering paper work and reduced to its practical essen-tials under an order issued by Lt. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, Commanding General, Army Ground Forces, the War Department announced 21 Jan.

The spirit of the order is clear in General McNair's criticism of overemphasis on paper work in an example drawn from on paper work in an example drawn from motor maintenance.

"In certain observed instances," he stated, "motor maintenance stresses elab-orate records—some kept by drivers and mechanics at the expense of work on vehicles. These methods generally smack of shop and garrison rather than the field. Vehicles are maintained properly by Vehicles are maintained properly by tools, elbow grease, and dirty hands, not by pencils and forms."

Unit commanders and the troops they are working with in the field have no are working with in the field have no time to read voluminous directives, the Army believes. Schedules are sufficient, with reference when necessary to War Department training manuals, today more complete, better prepared and sounder than ever before in our history. Training orders for the division and be-low should be oral. Oral orders are more effective, they promote leadership and initiative and, since they are the type which will be used by smaller units in battle, they are themselves a good form of training.

Training directives prepared by Head-

Hereafter written reports on training progress will not be required of units lower than a division. No advance prepa-ration for a test will be expected, and the tests will be limited in time. The detail of officers, engaged in training troops to service on boards, is no longer favored.

Commission Men With Defects

Identical bills, H. R. 1363 and H. R. 1355, have been introduced by Representatives Maas, of Minn., and Byrne, of N. Y., relative to the appointment and retirement in the Reserve Corps of the Army of persons with physical disabilities.

The bills provide that persons with other than organic physical defects which will not interfere with the performance of general or special duties and who are qualified to perform those duties may be appointed in the Reserve Corps and or-dered to active duty. Officers now in the Reserve Corps may be ordered to duty under similar circumstances

Reserve Officers ordered to duty upon waiver of physical disability are not to be eligible for retirement benefits be-cause of aggravation of the waived dis-ability, but will be eligible for these benefits for other disability incident to the Similar legislation for the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard was approved by the last Congress.

Youngest Inf. Lt. Col.?

The 78th "Lightning" Division, Camp Butner, N. C., claims one of the youngest Infantry lieutenant colonels in the country with the recent promotion of Lt. Col. Peter C. Hyzer, 28 years old, from the the rank of major.

Lieutenant Colonel Hyzer, a graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, is commander of the Third Battalion of the 31th Infantry.

West Point Regulations

A number of changes to Army Regula-tions which govern admission to the Mili-tary Academy have been issued by the War Department. For the most part these changes merely carry into effect al-ready-announced policies, but not hereto-fore announced are the designations of the various classes under the 3-year cur

It is provided that first year cadets shall be the Fourth Class; second year cadets, the Third Class, and third year cadets, the First Class. There will be no cadets, the First Class. There will be no Second Class. Cadets taking pilot training are designated as "Air Cadets," while those not taking such instruction are called "Ground Cadets,"

The changes cover the act of 3 June 1942 which increased the number of cadets from Congressional sources and provided for appointment of candidates and alternates by the Academic Board to and alternates by the Academic Board to fill last minute vacancies. They also cover the appointment of a third alternate by each Congressman, and the appointment of 40 cadets from among sons of service personnel who were killed in action or died from service-connected disabilities of dled from service-connected disabilities of World War I.

Provision is also made to carry out the recent announcement that the Regular Army and National Guard vacancies are open in 1943 to enlisted men of the Army of the United States

Soldiers Get "Barter Bags"

So complete were the preparations for the North African campaign that soldiers landing there were provided with "barter landing there were provided with "barter bags" filled with items which they could trade with the natives. Information to this effect was released this week in an announcement to the press designed to show how the Army anticipates all the soldiers needs. The release calls attention to the pressure regulation feetbalding the national statement. to the new regulation forbidding the mailing of packages to soldiers overseas except to send items specifically requested by the soldier and approved by his commanding officer.

"The 'barter bag,'" the release states,

"is a picturesque instance of the Quarter-master Corps' efforts to anticipate the needs of the soldier, and to adapt its methods to unusual conditions. These bags were issued in North Africa. Conbags were issued in North Artea. Containing beads, scissors, cloths, perfumes, candies, cigarettes, and food items that had a scarcity value, they provided a basis for trading for local products wanted by the soldiers."

Count Double Time Twice

Retired enlisted men who counted for-eign service as double time in figuring the 30 years necessary before retirement, would also count the time as double time for pay purposes, under a bill, S. 490, in-troduced this week by Senator Gillette, of

Ia.

The War Department is known to oppose the bill.

When enlisted men reach maximum pay When chilisted men reach maximum pay after 16 or 20 years' service, the fact that part of their 30 years' necessary service was double-time service had no effect on retired pay. Under the new pay act, lon-gevity of straight-time men was increased from 25 per cent to 50 per cent of base may. Men who carred double time get 40. Men who earned double time get 40 Day. to 45 per cent of base pay if they retired after 30 years' consecutive service.

The War Program

The railroads of the United States, de-The railroads of the United States, de-spile the difficulties of depression, went in this war with the most efficient plant in their history, and the best operating methods. As they have met and mastered as job after another, the morale of the identity and of all connected with it has implied they are on the right track in the way in with they are tackling their growing hich they are tackling their growing pib.

Ballroad men recognize, perhaps more sently than anyone else, that they have a still bigger job ahead of them. They haw, too, that with other war needs that they are, they will have to do the pip not with all the equipment they will sed but with what equipment they can get. That means that we shall have to get more work out of each freight car.

Ver. has been exceptilished along that Yuch has been accomplished along that he already. The 1941 freight car did as in already. The 1941 freight car did as much work as one and one-half cars in the war year of 1918. The 1942 car is do-ing even more than the 1941 car. Indeed, with about 500,000 fewer freight cars than with about 500,000 fewer freight cars than 1918, the railroads in 1942 will turn out bloat one and one-half times as much height transportation as they did then— and will do it without the congestion of

That isn't an achievement of just the nilronds, however. It could never have been accomplished without the organized coperation of shippers with the railronds, as well as of the railronds with me another. And it is being carried on solay with the cooperation of the biggest slipper of them all, the government of the United States.

As an example of what shippers, including the government, do to help get more use out of existing railroad plants, consider the June 15 circular letter of Major General Groes, Chief of the Transportation Service, S. O. S., of the Army, calling upon War Department shippers and consignees for "extraordinary effort to preserve freight car equipment and That isn't an achievement of just the preserve freight car equipment and

loading, minimum detention for loading and unloading with a limit of 24 hours except in the most unusual circumstances, loading so as to avoid damage or contamination of cars, clean unloading of dunnage and debris, and careful and prompt ordering of cars to meet actual or dunnage and debris, and careful and prompt ordering of cars to meet actual requirements. He calls for close cooper-ation between shipper and consignee to maintain a steady flow of materials and supplies, and for advance ordering and stocking of those commodities which can be moved now instead of at the fall peak of business. The reason for all this is a realization that "proper utilization of commercial transportation space and conservation of equipment may easily prove as important a single factor in winning the war as any other."

Transportation is recognized in America now as a matter of teamwork. The team consists of the shipper, the carrier, team consists of the shipper, the carrier, the consignee and the government. Through plans made as much as twenty years ago, and through organization which was tried and tested long before the war, this four-way transportation team is working to do its full share in winning the war.

Mr. Pepper's bill, S. 451, is a counter-part of a bill he attempted without suc-cess to get enacted last year. The measure would give the same retired pay for four years' full-time service as will be pro-vided for Generals Marshall, MacArthur and Eisenhower when they retire.

Etiquette Lessons for WAVES

From the Bureau of Naval Personnel has come authoritative information on the perplexing problems of Naval etti-quette which the advent of the WAVE has proposed.

Should a WAVE salute or be saluted should a WAVE salute or be saluted when wearing her hat where a man ordi-narily would not wear a hat? Should she be addressed as "ma'am," "sir," or "miss"? Granted that the senior should precede the junior, suppose the senior male desires the junior WAVE to go first, what then? Answers to these and similar problems are found in the following statement by BuPers:

ment by Bul'ers:

"The rules of military courtesy apply—rank takes precedence. But because military courtesy includes deference to women, and because a senior's wish is an implied command, if a senior male officer indicates he prefers courtesy to women above the strict military usage, the junior female should act accordingly without any hesitation or embarrassing counter-deference.

ingly without any hesitation or embarrassing counter-deference.

"Simply stated, the normal military procedure for a WAVE ensign is to stand aside for a male lleutenant, and the senior male officer is acting in a perfectly proper manner if he assumes the privilege of his rank. But if the lleutenant indicates that he wishes the ensign to go ahead first, then she is supposed to go without any fuss or feathers.

"The question of salutes has also been settled officially by regulations prescribed in Circular Letter No. OP-13-C for WAVES and Navy Nurses alike: in general, the regulations and customs applicable to saluting of and saluting by men in the Naval Service apply for the women. Juniors salute first, whether it be a junior male saluting a WAVE, or a junior WAVE saluting a senior male officer.

"But in situations where the WAVES and nurses, being women, would keep their hats on even though men would remove their caps (in the theatre, or church, or at mess, for instance) it is presumed that the hat is not being worn as a badge of office, but in conformance to civilian rather than military custom—and in such instances the salute will

"The question of whether a senior WAVE should be called 'sir,' as male officers are called, or whether she should be 'ma'am' as some have suggested, has likewise been resolved in a simple manner. If the officer is being addressed by name, it would be 'Miss' (or 'Mrs.') Jones, following the Naval usage of addressing all officers of rank of lieutenant commander and under by that form. If the officer is not being addressed by name, simply use the rank: 'Aye, aye, lieutenant,' or 'Good morning, lieutenant.' The usage thus follows the Marine Corps and Army custom.

"For written address, the rank is used for members of the Women's Reserve in the same manner as for other members of the Naval not be given.

"Addressing an enlisted WAVE follows the

"Addressing an enlisted WAVE follows the same procedure as for enlisted men—last name only. Use of 'Miss' would be confused with the usage for WAVE officers,
"One further problem which has arisen is the question of WAVE officers attending social functions with enlisted men or enlisted women attending with male officers. The custom of the Service requires great circumspection in social relationships in order to avoid any compromising of their relative military positions. However, the commanding officer any compromising of their relative military positions. However, the commanding officer of the WAVES has ruled that officers and enlisted personnel of opposite sexes may attend social functions together so long as they conduct themselves in accordance with the general rules of conduct applicable to ladies and gentlemen in any social or nonmilitary situation.

eral rules or conduct application.

"The general policy regarding military courtesy toward and by WAVES has been established on the basis that the Navy has absolutely no intention of 'defeminizing' the women in the Service and wants them to be treated with as much special courtesy as may be consistent with military practice and necessity. Military organization efficiency requires observance of the regulations concerning precedence of rank, but in any individual instance the judgment of the senior officer concerned will govern whether or not he may relax the rule."

As to use of the female general practicioner in the war effort, the Army feels that the woman doctor remains available to help relieve the general doctor shortage whether she is taken into the Army, thus leaving one male doctor to serve a civilian community for each woman taken, or whether the man is taken into the ser-vice, leaving the woman practitioner to serve her home community.

It is argued that the latter course is more satisfactory. If women should be commissioned in the Army a decision would have to be made on whether they would be sent to the fronts or assigned to general and station hospitals in the to general and station hospitals in the United States. There are many reasons advanced by the Army against, sending women doctors into the front lines un-less the shortage should develop to a point where it becomes an absolute ne-cessity. But if they are to be used only in the United States then they are receiving all of the advantages of a military commission without running any of the risks. It is reported that there are only ten women contract surgeons in the Army, although an assignment of this nature is perfectly feasible for the female general practitioner, it is generally conceded. titioner, it is generally conceded.

WAVES Reserve Act Amendment

Rep. Maas, Minn., introduced H. R. 1364 this week to remove the limit on number of WAVES in the grades of lieutenant commander, lieutenant and lieutenant (jg).

Limitation of service to shore duty also would be removed. Section 506, in which benefits for disability or death in line of duty were denied, will be removed by the bill. Section 508 limited tenure of a listment and appointment. The new bil removes this section and so would perm service after the war.

Denies Normandie Gutted

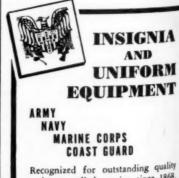

New York City Fire Commissioner Patrick Walsh, in a report this week, branded as "incorrect" statements that the steamship Lafayette, formerly the French liner Normandie, was "gutted by free at her North River pier berth, 9 Feb. when she burned and capized. Walsh declared that the fire was under control less than three and one-half hours after the arrival of the first fire apparatus.

"Upon the arrival of the Fire Department", he said "fire already had possession of the three topmost decks. The fire did not spread, but was confined to these decks and was extinguished. The Fire Department responded on the first alarmat 3 P. M. The fire was out at 6:30 P. M.

"The Normandie displaced 83,000 tons he added. "The total volume of water meeting the Fire Department in extinguishing the fire on the three upper decks was 6,000 tons. At least 90 per cent of this was washed overboard."

OUR PRIORITY LIST

Victory.
 Assurance now that personnel and equipment for our land, sea, and air forces will be maintained after the present war at such strengths as the responsible heads of those Services determine necessary to assure this nation against future aggressors.
 Protection of Service personnel, active and retired, against undue reductions in their pay through imposition of the Victory tax and income taxes.
 Institution of studies looking toward the protection and development of just post-war systems of promotion for personnel of the permanent establishments.
 Strengthening of the post war status of the National Guard and Reserves to assure their efficiency and permanency with continuance of full training facilities after the war.
 Upward revision of pension scales to assure Service widows a living income.
 Compensation for service personnel who use privately owned automobiles on government business.

ILITARY aviation in the United States made another great stride this week toward complete recognition by, and complete amalgamation in, the United States Army. The class which graduated Tuesday from the United States Military Academy included 164 members who, having earned their wings by flight training at Stewart Field, were commissioned directly in the Air Corps. This is the first time this has been done. In the past, Military Academy graduates desiring a career in aviation were commissioned first in some other arm then sent to a flight training school from whence, on successful completion of the course, they were transferred to the Air Corps. Now their basic air training runs concurrently with their basic military education. This is as it should be. Under Secretary of War Patterson, in addressing the class, paid great tribute to the air arm, asserting that the United States is now building the most powerful striking force from the air the world has ever known. He predicted that "our planes of new design already on the production line with heavier hammering power" would be more than a match for those of our enemies. The brilliant record being made by the air components of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard justifies the great stress being laid upon air power by the President. Aside from the losses suffered by the earth-bound planes on 7 Dec. 1941 (attributable to perfidy of the Japanese and our lack of coordination), our aerial forces have heavily bested the enemy in ratio of planes lost in every theater of action. In production we are proceeding at a rate which soon will leave the Axis far behind. General Arnold reported last month that "there is every indication that we are shooting down Japanese aircraft faster than they are building them." The earlier reports of the investigations by the House Military Affairs Subcommittee and the exhaustive report by Mr. Elmer Davis' Office of War Information, attest to the high quality and deadly effectiveness of our American produced airplanes. In men and material our aerial forces are a source of pride to all our fighting men and civilians.

HE American mind will accept as common-sense the statement made by Under Secretary of the Navy Forrestal to the House Rules Committee, that "I would rather have a warship than a simon-pure record," Mr. Forrestal was testifying in connection with a proposal later adopted, for continuing investigation of naval costs and the practice of renegotiating contracts, The Military and Naval Committees claim their past inquiries have enabled savings to the Government of some $2 billions. When he assumed office, the Under Secretary said he attempted to make a detailed analysis of contracts, but soon discovered that more important than dickering over prices was the delivery of vessels. This sensible decision was based upon the need of speeding preparations for war, which it was clear was impending, and of replacing losses we suffered at and after Pearl Harbor. Ships and more ships including carriers, were the demand of the Service in order to rebuild and increase our strength, to counter the submarine menace, to maintain our far-flung lines of communications, and, above ail, to have at the point of battle, forces superior to those of our enemies. Bluntly he testified that "if we made honest mistakes in prices, then dollars could be recaptured. but time lost is gone forever." The War Department, too, has undertaken the negotiation of contracts on a large scale. It should not be forgotten that in submitting proposals, industry itself was confronted with rising labor and material costs both for care of the Government's needs, and for construction under contracts awarded. When it found as the work progressed that the contract prices were too high, it demonstrated entire willingness to negotiate for their reduction. Hence the statement of Mr. Forrestal that "American business, by and large, does not want to be a profiteer in this war, quite the contrary. Ninety-five per cent of the men in American business are quite conscious of the undesirability of excessive profits." The picture of the Government hand in hand with industry which the Under Secretary drew, is that of a united nation, determined with all the speed it can make, to overwhelm our enemies, and that at the least cost in blood and treasure. Certainly, in view of this picture, the Department of Justice should move slowly in prosecutions under the anti-trust or other laws that take up the time of management, and, consequently, delay deliveries. The war has got to be won whatever the cost, and after it is over then if there be law violations the guilty can be punished.

It was well that Lt. Edmund L. Dale,
USA, Instructor in Engineering, USMA, wrote for the Christian Monitor, the ofcial organ of the archdiocese of San Pracisco, his views on the military defense of California and the Pacific coast, for his able essay should do much to around the people around the Golden Gate to the helplessness of their condition in the event of war with an oriental power.

A project is on foot to revoluntosis the army bringing it into line with the spirit of our institutions; to draw close the Regulars and Reserves; to make the military profession more prominent is the social world; to equalize the different grades, prevent stagnation, and make premotion more rapid; to regulate the pay and give working grades due prominence; to make the Military Academy a university; and above all to give every anbitious and enterprising youth and mal opportunity to spend a short time in the army and without loss of honor, digain army and without loss of honor, digaly or social standing, but with pleasure ad profit acquire a graceful carriage, at athletic presence and a knowledge of mil-tary matters. tary matters.

WAVES In Action

Navy machinists are to have feminine belpers. Two schools, at Norman, Okla., and Memphis, Tenn., are to be opened 1 Feb. to train WAVES to become aviation machinists mates. Graduates will receive the ratings and pay of regular machinists mates. A school for aerographers mates is to be opened at Lakehurst, N. J., to provide assistants in weather observa-

Gen. Hurley Leaves Cairo United States Army Forces in the Mid-e East—Brig. Gen. Patrick Hurley left United States Army Forces in the Mid-de East—Brig. Gen. Patrick Hurley left Cairo 8 Jan., having spent three days con-ferring with officers of the American, British, and other allied commands here. Discusses Military Government

The problems faced in setting up military government and the efforts the Army is taking to solve these problems were outlined to a joint meeting of the Federal Bar Association and the Military and Naval Law Committee in Washington, D. C., 13 Jan., by Brig. Gen. Cornelius W. Wickersham, USA, commandant of the School of Military Government at Charlottesville, Va.

General Wickersham's address was printed in the Congressional Record by Representative Wickersham, of Okla. The address emphasized that military occupation of enemy territory ends civil government there. The distinction between military government and martial law was clearly defined, military government having to do with rule of occupied enemy territory, whereas martial law has to do with ruling domestic populations through the military forces.

The military commander in the theatre of operations becomes the military governor, and his assistants, military officers or civilians, are known as civil affairs officers. They are selected specialists capable of administering financial, public beatth, education, public sufety, legal health, education, public safety, legal matters, communications, public welfare, economics and public relations in the oc-cupied territory. Chaos, physical, mental and moral, has to be overcome. They are the ones to effect this.

To make certain the unpreparedness of the United States for military government in 1918 is not repeated at the conclusion of the present war, the School of Military Government has been established under the supervision of Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, the Provost Marshal General.

The President State Department of

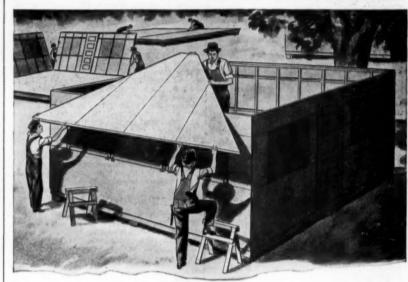

The President, State Department or other agencies of the Government lay down the policies to be carried out by the military authorities. Many operatives are needed, but out of 2,000 applicants at the beginning of January only 150 were selected.

At the school courses are given in all pertinent subjects. Past experiences of other governments as well as those of the United States are studied. Much research work is necessary. Student officers are in grades from captain to colonel, and allotments of expectally gradient. and allotments of especially qualified civilians, commissioned sometimes in the Specialist Reserve, are made by the War

Specialist Reserve, are made by the War Department.

The general policy of the United States in the line of military government is laid down as follows: "As military government is executed by force, it is incumbent on those who administer it to be strictly wided by the windighter of invites better. guided by the principles of justice, honor and humanity—virtues adorning a soldier even more than other men for the very reason that he possesses the power of his arms against the unarmed."

Just six man-hours time TO HOUSE SIX SOLDIERS WELL!

The Victory Hut literally leaps into being to house soldiers, sailors, marines and Coast Guardsmen...Construction time with an experienced crew is only six man-hours with important savings to government as a result.

The Victory Hut is not an accident. It is the direct result of efforts of the armed forces to obtain fully pre-fabricated, demountable, portable housing, to give maximum satisfaction in camp and under actual field conditions, at minimum cost to government. Records show saving of $30 to $50 per man housed.

Air-Space insulated as a protection against both extreme heat and cold, solidly constructed and as scientifically designed as a weapon, the Victory Hut is paying big returns today in high troop morale, plus valuable days and dollars saved.

If your duties involve bousing of personnel, ask us for Huts and the actual conditions under which they have been erected. See for yourself the time-and money-saving features of these huts; consider their application to your problem! A letter or wire will bring you "Victory Huts and Homes."

Seek More Blood Donors

The Army and Navy have asked the American Red Cross to procure 4,000,000 pints of blood during 1943, more than three times the amount obtained from volunteer donors at Red Cross centers last year, Chairman Norman H. Davis reported this week.

The request was made, Chairman Davis said, in a letter from Maj. Gen. James C. Magee and Rear Adm. Ross T. McIntire, Surgeons General of the Army and Navy, respectively. The Surgeons General declared that plasma is one of the most important contributions to the medical departments, adding that it becomes daily more evident that the blood is saving the lives of many fighting men who otherwise would have died. would have died.

Sultan of Morocco Sees Display

According to a report to the War Department from French Morocco, His Excellency Sidi Mohammed, Sultan of Morocco, and Arab News writers have visited American forces in Morocco, seeing a display of American strength on land and sea and in the air.

Escorted by ten new American light tanks, the Sultan rode with Maj. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., Army Commander in Morocco, and General Charles Nogues, French Resident General, to the outskirts in Morocco, and General Charles Nogues, French Resident General, to the outskirts of Casablanca to see a demonstration of the latest ground weapons. The display included heavy artillery, decontamination units, trucks from a quarter-ton to tenton size, a field hospital with American nurses, a mobile ordnance shop, and aircraft. He also visited an American warship.

Lavigie Marocain, a local daily newspaper, commented: "The press was greatly impressed by the excellence of the material demonstrated, the remarkable efficiency of the weapons and the proven excellent training of the American troops."

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—The necessity of a Supreme Command in North Africa is increasingly apparent with the advance of the American and British Armies and French de tachments upon Tunisia from Algeria, and the pursuit of the battered force of General Rommel by the British 8th Army under General Montgomery, and of scattered Italian units by the Free French moving northward from Lake Tchad. It would seem that this high authority would be vested in General Eisenhower, who was designated as "Commander-in-Chief of Allied Operations in North Africa." However, this designation did not contemplate the inclusion in his command of General Montgomery's force. There was also the complication arising from the attitude of the Free French toward him as a result of his recognition of the assassinated Admiral Darlan and of his successor, General Giraud, in political control of the French possessions in North Africa, Further irritating to the Free French was the action of General Giraud in recalling Marcel Peyrouton as Governor General of Algeria. Peyrouton was Secretary of the Interior in the Vichy Ministry before withdrawing as a result of his refusal to cooperate with Laval and his associates in France. Although the British Deputy Prime Minister and other British officials have expressed complete confidence in General Eisenhower, and have gone so far as to say he has a British power of attorney, the London Press has been attacking him because of his action with respect to Darlan and Giraud, and has gone so far as to charge him with responsibility for the delay in marching upon Tunisia. The General's influence in North Africa further was weakened by the President's statement that the recognition of Darlan was merely a "temporary expedient." Yet, his policy resulted in the saving of thousands of American and British lives which would have been lost had the French in North Africa offered more than the "token' resistance they did to the Allied landing. So far as the alleged delay in moving upon Tunisia is concerned, it is a matter of common knowledge that General Eisenhower was compelled to build airfields for the plane operations essential to attack, and, moreover, the deep mud caused by the rains prevented swift maneouvre by tanks and ground troops. The War Department and the Army have not failed to laud General Eisenhower for his conduct of political and military operations to date, which is the American answer to the criticism he has suffered. It is certain he is not to be humillated in spite of the political pressure applied, but that his authority and responsibility will continue to be agreeable to him and to our country.

The fact that this is a global war is further emphasized by the German litters over a possible landing by the United Nations in Norway. The Scandinavian area is aroused over the prospects that have developed from Russian relief of Leningrad through the capture of the powerful German fortress at Schlusselburg. Finland is concerned over the weakening, if not interruption, of land communications with the German Army, and the likelihood of a strong attack against her defenses. This might occur simultaneously with an Anglo-American Army debarking in Norway. In such case, Hitler undoubtedly would demand that Sweden permit passage for his troops shipped from Denmark for use in reenforcing the Finns and the German occupying force in Norway. Fearing this possibility, Swedish Prime Minister Hansson warned his people of a possible attack upon them, and issued orders to the local authorities and citizens to act on their own initiative in the organization and disposal of their own defense forces. Evidently, he feared that Fifth Columnists would operate as they did in the nations which Hitler conquered. That Germany would avoid invasion of Sweden and do so only as a last resort, is evident from the dependence she places upon the free shipment of iron ore and other necessities from that land. What Hitler is planning in order to reseize the initiative is not definitely known, though there continue indications that he has designs upon the Near East via the Aegean Sea route. But it is apparent that if the United Nations were to attack in Scandinavia he would find it difficult to inaugurate an eastern campaign. As it is he is having difficulties in Russia, as shown by the continued Red advance and the heavy losses in men and materials his Armies are suffering as they retreat to their prepared defenses. These losses have been particularly inflicted upon his Allies, Roumanians, Hungarians and Italians, and in the Balkan States have promoted opposition to continuance in the war. However, in spite of them —the Germans, too, have sustained many casualties—it is agreed by Russian leaders that the Reich's High Command will be able to launch a new offensive next summer. This estimate makes it all the more necessary for large shipments of tanks, planes and other munitions to reach Russia. That Ally is now the chief beneficiary of our export production today, and Britain also is contributing. Up to 1 January 1943, Lend-Administrator Stettinius reported that the United States had shipped to the Soviet Union 2,600 planes, more than had been shipped under Lend-Lease to England or any other country. In addition, we shipped 3,200 tanks and 81,000 trucks, jeeps and other military vehicles. The United Kingdom shipped more than 2,000 planes and 2,600 tanks. This aid has been warmly welcomed by the Red Army, as is the promise that increasing quantities will be sent. Unfortunately, there have been losses from U-boat operations, and there is fear they will mount. The First Lord of the Admiralty, A. Alexander, has pointed out that German submarines are operating in larger packs and with new tactics, and those tactics involve echelons of packs. The Germans claim that in 1942 their U-Boats sank 1,208 English and American vessels, and their planes and mines 242 merchantmen, making a grand total of 1,450 vessels with a tonnage of 8,490,000 tons. We built slightly more than 8,000,000 tons in 1942, so that we have barely replaced the vessels lost.

The ranks of the United Nations have been enlarged by the action of Chile in rupturing relations with the Axis Powers and Japan. This welcome step, which was to have been expected from a neighbor faithful to the principle of Pan-American solidarity, unquestionably will have world-wide repercussions. It will have special influence in South America and upon Argentina, the single hold out in the Western Hemisphere against the union of its countries. It will affect Spanish policy, because of the language ties existing between the two states. Just as Japan threatened what she would do to Chile in case she joined the United Nations, so Germany is now threatening. However, small though the Chilean Army and Navy be, we all know the bravery and gallantry of the people, and we may expect them to fight wholeheartedly against the forces of aggression. Now that relations have been broken with our enemies, we may expect the Chilean President to pay his long deferred visit to Washington.

Medical Administrative Corps—Two hundred and nine enlisted men of the Medical Department of the Army will receive commissions as Second Lieutenants when they are graduated today, 23 Jan., from the Officer Candidate Course at the Army's Medical Field Service School, Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Chosen to attend the school by reason of their excellent military records, the men were under instruction for the past three months, and won their commissions as 5 ond Lieutenants in the Medical Administrative Corps on the basis of merit and o standing performance of duty.

Brigadier-General Addison D. Davis, Commandant of the Medical Field Sen School and Assistant Surgeon General of the Army, presented the diplomas and iters of commission at this morning's exercises in Tugo Hall. In congratulating a officers, General Davis gave a brief history of the Medical Administrative Corp. omcers, General Davis gave a brief history of the medical Administrative Community of the Medical Field Service School which was established by the Department following the World War was given by Col. Lt. Col. Edward A. Allen has been named the Commandant of the Western nal Corps School which is occupying the grounds of the University of California Agricultural School at Davis. This newest Signal Corps School is scheduled to me about 1 Feb. Col. Allen, prior to his present assignment, served as Chief of State the Central Signal Corps Training Center at Camp Crowder.

Brig. Gen. H. L. P. King, formerly Chief of the Military Personnel Branch, fice of the Chief Signal Officer, Washington, D. C., has been assigned as Command of the Central Signal Corps School at Camp Crowder. Brig. Gen. C. M. Milli formerly Director of the Signal Troops Division of the Office of the Chief Si Officer, has been named Commanding General of the Central Signal Corps Replace Training Center at Camp Crowder. Maj. Gen. Walter E. Prosser remains as Camander of the Central Signal Corps Training Center at Crowder.

Lt. Col. Duncan Hodges, executive to General King in the Military Person Branch, was appointed to succeed his chief as head of that branch.

Brig. Gen. Frank C. Meade was named director of the Signal Troops Division

the Office of the Chief Signal Officer, succeeding General Milliken. General Me

previously was at the Central Signal Corps Training Center at Camp Crowder. Col. Carroll O. Bickelbaupt has been appointed Deputy Signal Officer under h Gen. Dawson Olmstead, Chief Signal Officer of the Army. Colonel Bickelhaupt is leave from Vice Presidency of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Other recent changes in the Office of the Chief Signal Officer saw Col. George Back appointed Assistant Chief of Signal Supply Services and Col. Francis J. Ian ahan, jr., named Director of Planning. Redesignation of the Signal Corps School at Camp Murphy to the Southern's Corps School has also been announced.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt visited the Eastern Signal Corps Training Center Fort Monmouth, N. J., 14 Jan. The First Lady combined a quick inspection of Special Service facilities at the Signal Corps post with a visit to friends in the repart and a luncheon at the Red Bank, N. J., U. S. O.

Mrs. Roosevelt was joined by Mrs. George L. Van Deusen and Mrs. Edgar Clewell at noon, and later in the afternoon was greeted by Brig. Gen. George L Val Deusen, Commanding General of the Eastern Signal Corps Training Center, 100 Col. James B. Haskell, Post Commander. The party was then conducted on a shot tour by Maj. Duncan E. McKinley, Post Special Services Officer.

At the Special Services office, Mrs. Roosevelt expressed admiration for the fig.

recreation facilities available at Fort Monmouth for servicemen, and the sple educational opportunities. She expressed pleasure after viewing the representati collection of books and magazines in the library.

Signal Corps officers at the Eastern Signal Corps Training Center, Fort Momouth, N. J., who have been attending weekly "orientation" classes for the past for months held a special conference on "The Infantry Division Organization and Weapons," on the main post. This was the most ambitious session held to date.

The conference was arranged by Col. Albert J. Hogle, Plans and Training of cer, and was conducted by Maj. J. D. Carton. Major Carton, who has been on duly with the Signal Corps Training Center at Fort Monmouth since June, 1942, is a former Infantry officer. He reviewed the organization of the present Infantry division. and stressed the employment of combat team organization.

High point in the conference was a demonstration by members of a nearby unit of the Eastern Defense Command of the operation and use of heavy weapons of the division

To insure uninterrupted production, all Signal Corps installation commis have been directed to appoint a safety officer to carry on a safety program for be civilian workers on their posts. Commanders have been authorized, also, to employ a civilian safety engineer to control such a program, if necessary.

Responsible for the establishment of the Signal Corps Safety Program, and for assistance in setting it up in each of the many Signal Corps facilities, is the recent organized Safety Section of the Civilian Personnel Branch of the Office of the Chie Signal Officer. The Section is headed by Harold L. Rush, who was with the Top Powder Company in Sandusky, Ohio, and for 6½ years prior was with the Unit States Army Engineers as Safety Engineer.

Safety regulations in considerable detail have been prepared and dispatched all branches and exempt stations of the Signal Corps, as a first step in carrying of the planned accident prevention program authorized by the Chief Signal Officer. In conjunction with the Civilian Training Section, Services of Supply, and the U. S. Office of Education, selected supervisors of the Signal Corps, from all sections of the country, will be enrolled in special 96-hour, 2-week courses in Safety and Helli Training. These courses will be held at universities and colleges all over the United States, and will begin early in 1942 States, and will begin early in 1943.

The Navy payroll savings plan, inaugurated 1 Jan. 1942, accounted for 56.2 per cent of the total, with the remainder divided between cash purchases and military allotments. Investments by civilian employees through the payroll savings plan mnted to $58,710,173.30.

The Navy plan proved so successful that in May it was adopted, in a slightly modified form, by the Interdepartmental Committee for the Payroll Savings Plan which was named by the President to establish a uniform plan of bond purchases in all Government departments and agencies.

Interest in this program was intensified in May when the Secretary of the Navy offered a special War Bond Honor Flag to all Naval activities which reached and maintained for two consecutive months the "90-10" standard of excellence—90 per cent of all personnel enrolled in the payroll plan and purchasing bonds to the extent of at least 10 per cent of their pay. At the close of the year the entire Navy shore establishment had almost reached this standard with 88.7 per cent of the total civilian employees investing 12.7 per cent of the total gross civilian payroll in bonds.

Marine Corps—The "Emperor's Cup", which Maj. J. E. Snow, USMC, Chief Range Officer at Camp Matthews Rifle Range, San Diego, Calif., won in a Japanese shooting contest at Tientsin, China. in 1928, will be given back to the Japs in the form of good hard bullets. The cup was won in a Jap-sponsored competition involving twelve-gauge abotguns, in which the Japanese army had entered its five best shots.

To give the meet an international flavor the Japs invited three Marine officers to npete, although the sponsors boasted that the Americans didn't have a chance. Marine officers in addition to Capt. Snow were Captains (now Colonels) W. G. Farrell and W. J. Wallace.

When the trap shooting was over, Captain Snow had won top honors, scoring 96 points out of a possible 100, seven points better than his nearest Jap competitor. There was great loss of face and consternation among the Nipponese. It would be heresy to give the Emperor's Cup, a silver loving cup standing three feet high, to an American. After searching in the rule book, one of the referees stated, with regrets, "that it would be impossible to give Capt. Snow the Emperor's Cup and would be please accept, instead, the smaller cup, properly inscribed, and a special prize of a Browning Automatic shotgun?"

For years this Japanese trick has rankled Maj. Snow. Now that the government is making a roundup of scrap metal to be made into bullets, he has decided that this would be a fitting and proper fate for the phoney Jap trophy.

Marines fighting on Guadalcanal found the ingenuity which enabled them to outsmart the Japanese also valuable in giving a "home touch" to their observance of Christmas. Delayed reports tell how the Marines fashioned Christmas trees from aluminum-painted palms and strung up coconuts painted red and green, arranged to spell out MERRY CHRISTMAS. Christmas night each company sang a carol of its own choosing.

Private Tyrone Power. Hollywood movie star, reported for training recently at the San Diego, Calif., Marine Corps base after completing a submarine picture. Power enlisted in the Corps in Washington, D. C., last August. He was placed on inactive duty until the Navy and his movie studio completed shooting of Powers' latest picture.

When he enlisted, he mentioned a preference for glider training, since he holds a pilots license. But when he reported he said he was just going to do his job and make up his mind later concerning any special preference.

Allotment Payment Delays—Further assurance against financial destitution has been given to dependents of enlisted men who have experienced delays in receiving their allotment-allowance checks. The Army Emergency Relief stands ready to advance loans immediately to tide men over until the checks are received. As reported last week, both from the floor of the House of Representatives and from officials in the Office Chief of Finance came assurances that the "hvmp" of applications for family allowances was about over and that papers would be expedited more than in

What has hit the enlisted men hardest financially is the fact that deductions from their pay begin when they file application for family allowances. If an undue delay there is between date of application and date the dependents receives his first check, the enlisted man is seldom able to extend further relief since deductions are already being made from his pay.

Officials of the Army Emergency Relief stated this week that they maintain an office in Newark, N. J., where the Office of Dependency Benefits is located. To this A.E.R. office are referred all applications for allotments and allowances when received, if the applications indicate that the resources of the applicant and his de-pendents are not sufficient to enable them to weather a delay. This office, if it conders a loan necessary and justified, wires to the applicant and to the section of the A.E.R. nearest his station.

This setup, of course, does not bar the enlisted man himself from seeing his manding officer to initiate the request for a loan after he has filed his application for the allowance.

The War Department this week, in an effort to ease the burden on the Office of Dependency Benefits and explain delays, issued a statement calling attention to the immense volume of work handled by the agencies and to the mistakes and omissions in applications which delay processing.

Through 31 Dec. 1942, the department reports, 1,519,055 applications had been received, and 1,294,852 approved. Of the small balance, 133,750 applications were temporarily disallowed pending submission of additional necessary information or evidence, and 10,607 applications were rejected. These figures refer to family allowance applications only; the Office of Dependency Benefits also handles emergency Class E allotments and voluntary Class E allotments. As of 31 Dec. the office had in effect a total of 779,544 Class E allotments, of which 183,617 were accounts received after 2 Nov. 1942.

Undoubtedly, the fine record of the office would have been even better had the Congress, the War Department and the Navy Department not indulged in a three-way Congress, the War Department and the Navy Department not indulged in a three-way game of "buck passing" last summer. Originally, it had been planned to start initial Payments 1 Nov. 1942, to permit all applications to be figured from a given date (Immensely simplifying bookkeeping) and to permit trained staffs to be recruited. However, as the first few complaints against non-payment began to come in, the Navy Department stated that it could pay immediately; the War Department that the law prevented them from paying immediately; the Congress that the date had been set at the request of the Army. All three statements were correct, but the Navy had originally agreed to work with the Army from the single date, recognizing that the Army had the bigger task; and the Army, Navy and Congress had jointly fixed the date which each later was so eager to disclaim.

Some reasons for delays in handling applications given by the Army in its report this week are: (1) No record of application's receipt, due often to improper addressing. Some applications from overseas have arrived as much as 151 days after date on the papers; some from this country as much as 35 days after date of application. (2) Informal applications filed by soldiers were never followed up by formal applications. (3) Soldier and dependent both have filed, resulting in work to eliminate duplications. (4) Omission of essential information, such as applicants Army serial number, correct address of dependent to whom checks are to be paid, and documentary evidence to establish the relationship of the dependent to the soldier.

Ordnance Department—Assurance that American troops are obtaining small arms ammunition only of the highest quality has been made definitely by Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson. His announcement was the result of an investigation of the government-owned St. Louis Ordnance Plant, operated by the United States Cartridge Company.

The special board of experts appointed 6 Jan. 1943, by Maj. Gen. T. J. Hayes, Assistant Chief of Ordnance, for the purpose of making a technical investigation of the manufacturing and inspection methods, technique and equipment of the St. Louis Ordnance Plant, has made its report. The Board consisted of:

Col. Merle H. Davis, Chief, St. Louis Ordnance District, an officer of the regular army with 20 years of ammunition experience.

Capt. James H. Dunbar, Jr., who is chief of engineering and inspection at the small arms ammunition sub-office in Philadelphia.

Capt. Frank H. Grossman, engineering officer of the small arms division, Frankford Arsenal.

Mr. Henry F. Hover, general foreman of inspection, small arms division, Frankford Arsenal, who has had 25 years of experience in the manufacture and inspection of small arms ammunition.

Mr. Arthur W. Darby, mechanical engineer (tool), small arms division, Frankford Arsenal, who has had 27 years of experience in manufacture and tool design in ammunition.

The St. Louis Ordnance Plant, is the largest small arms ammunition manufacturing plant in the United States.

Navy Relief Society—Four new auxiliaries and a branch establishment of the Navy Relief Society were organized at new Naval bases and stations during the first year of the war, it has been announced by Admiral J. O. Richardson, USN-Ret., executive Vice President in charge of the Society's War-expanded work.

More auxiliaries probably will be founded during the current year to increase the present total of 34. Three former units have been victims of the war—there are no longer auxiliaries at Cavite in the Philippines, in Peiping, or in Shanghai, China. The new auxiliaries are at Bainbridge, Md., York River, Va., Quonset Point, and Now Biver, N. C. The Washington Society has opened a branch at Dahl-R. I., and New River, N. C. The Washington Society has opened a branch at Dahlgren, Va.

Helping sailors and their families through the unexpected emergencies that crop up in Navy households is a job which has increased tenfold since last year at this time, according to the estimate of Mrs. Robert M. Griffin, one of the Society's vice presidents. The troubles of Navy men and their families now reverberate into all the distant stations occupied by the Navy along the battle fronts of today's global war. Each new casualty list is a list of new assignments for Navy Relief volunteers -all wives of Navy officers who give their time and train themselves to work by professional social welfare standards. A Navy Relief volunteer calls at the home of every family afflicted by the news of the dead and the missing. She will find out if there is a money crisis in the home, and she will also bring the understanding condolence of another Navy wife who knows the anxieties of those who fearfully await the news of every sea action. Where there are no Navy Relief Auxiliaries, the Red Cross serves as the outlying eyes and ears of the Society.
Until last year's campaign which raised $5,000,000 to help meet the war-expanded burdens of the Navy Relief, the Society had financed itself from within the service. The contributions, which often include the fees received by Navy men for public addresses, books and magazine articles, are concentrated on actual help to applicants, because of the volunteer system of administration and investigation.

Honorary president of the Society is Admiral Ernest J. King, USN, Commander in Chief, U. S. Fleet and Chief of Naval Operations. Serving with Admiral Richardson, in active charge, are Rear Adm. Charles Conard, USN, and Mrs. Griffin, as vice presidents, and a board of Navy officers and wives of Navy officers.

Auxiliaries of the Navy Relief Society are located in the following centers of Naval activity: Annapolis, Md.; Bainbridge, Md.; Boston, Mass.; Bremerton, Wash.; Camp Peary, Va.; Charleston, S. C.; Corpus Christi, Tex.; Dahlgren, Va.; Great Lakes, Ill.; Hawaii, T. H.; Hawthorne, Nev.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Lakehurst, N. J.; Long Beach, Calif.; Mare Island, Calif.; Miami, Fla.; New River, N. C.; New London, Conn.; New Orleans, La.; Newport, R. I.; New York City, N. Y.; Norfolk, Va.; Pensacola, Fla.; Philadelphia, Penna.; Portland, Ma.; Portsmouth, N. H.; Portsmouth, Va.; Quonset Point, R. I.; Quantico, Va.; Seattle, Wash.; San Diego, Calif.; San Francisco, Calif.; San Pedro, Calif. and Washington, D. C.

Knitted Blankets for Navy—Knitted blankets, as thick and durable as the woven blankets the Navy has been using in the past, will soon be keeping the bluejackets of the U. S. Navy warm.

The traditional Navy blanket has been woven on looms, which travel more slowly than knitting machinery, and its color scheme has been white with blue stripe. The new blanket will be grey, knitted swiftly on machines which have been perfected to knit heavy overcoating material similar in appearance to woven cloth.

The Bureau of Supplies and Accounts has placed contracts for the new blanket, which was developed in eastern knitting mills.

Development of the new source of supply has headed off a threatened bottle-neck in production of urgently needed blankets, according to Rear Adm. William Brent Young, Supply Corps, USN, Chief of the Bureau of Supplies and accounts and Paymaster General of the Navy. All regular blanket mills and many converted mills have been working at peak capacity to produce millions of woven blankets for both

The new Navy blankets are smooth and strong, hold their shape and will require less laundering than the old ones. Experiments conducted by the Navy show they meet specifications for hard Navy use.

The President's Sons—Bitter recrimination was provoked in the House this week by a charge by Representative Lambertson, of Kans., that the President's sons, Lt. Col. James Roosevelt, USMCR, and Lt. (jg) Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., had been pulled from combat zones by orders. Majority Leader McCormack, of Mass., said the statement did not convey the facts. Representative Gore, of Tenn., defended the military records of the President's sons, pointing out that they had distinguished themselves in battle—that Elliott Roosevelt still was in North Africa. Mr. Lambertson maintained his charge, but stated that he was not criticizing the three sons, that if any of them had been removed from battle zones it was not their own doing.

Army Medical Department—Announcement of the successful applicants for appointment in the Regular Army Medical Corps who took the examination of August, 1942, is expected to be made within the next few days. However, it will not be possible to tender Regular Army appointments to any of this group immediately since about eight names still remain on the eligible list created as a result of the last Steps taken by the Army to maintain the health of its soldiers will be described tomorrow by Maj. Gen. James C. Magee, in an address over the Atlantic Coast Network, from Station WWDC, Washington, at 3 p.m., 24 Jan.

JAPANESE LINGO

In five months Japanese Lingo has sold amost 6,000 copies, gone into a thoroughly mised 2nd Edition and become the basis of acourse at the N. Y. Institute of Finance. The card game method for languages has proved not only good fun but practical. At the lautitute students were half way through languages on cards in saven become and used ingo's 90 cards in seven lessons and used he Japanese idiom with assurance.

Military German Lingo has joined the lingo family and Military French Lingo well on the way. Both are tailored to the areds of the moment, both require a slight Prior knowledge of the language and both are arranged to review rules of syntax.

June $1.50, the others $1.25, all postpaid.

Sea Services Casualties

Casualty list No. 20 was released by the Navy Department on 19 Jan. The list contained 1,219 names of personnel of the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard and brings the grand total of those services' casualties since 7 Dec. 1941 to 31 Dec. 1942 to 21,497.

Dec. 1942 to 21,497.

Most of these casualties resulted from direct action with the enemy, but also included are names of those who were lost in accidents at sea and in the air on duty directly connected with war time opera-Natural deaths or accidents connected with operations against the enemy are not included in the total.

Some of those classified as missing may have been rescued at sea and landed at isolated spots or otherwise made their way to safety at places from which they have had no opportunity to communicate with Naval authorities.

The list follows:

Col. and Mrs. J. E. Morrissette have been house guests of Mrs. Marshall Williams, and been extensively entertained by the many friends here, where they were stationed last year when Mrs. Morrissette was head of and most active in helping to organize the Women's Motor Corps.

Another popular couple, Maj. and Mrs. David Burchinal, AC, are here for a month while Maj. Burchinal is on special duty. As Miss Jean Fales, Mrs. Burchinal was the Army debutante a couple of years ago, and has friends in town as well as Ft. Sam Houston and the air fields.

One of the prettiest teas given recently was held by Mrs. M. E. Sorley, in their quarters. She was celebrating her husband's promotion to Colonel. Vases of cut flowers decorated the living room, and the tea table, with a centerpiece of peach gladioil and candy-tuft, and at the ends of the table, a prettily decorated tath the ends of the table, a prettily decorated cake, and a large Hawaiian tray holding all of the available fruits, used as cups for the salad, made a most colorful picture. Assisting Mrs. Sorley were Mesdames R. H. Duenner, W. M. Hensley, Allan H. Gum and Jack Turner. About fifty friends called through the afternoon.

Modify New Airplanes

The United States has established a the United States has established a chain of aircraft tailoring shops, "modification centers" where standard mass-produced fighting planes are swiftly altered to meet requirements of campaigns throughout the global war.

paigns throughout the global war.

These centers are operated by airlines and aircraft factories under the supervision of the U. S. Army Air Forces Material Command's Production Division, or directly by the Air Forces at air de-Defining broad objectives, an official ir Forces spokesman stated, "Suppose Air Forces spokesman stated, "Suppose you make kitchen stoves. Your factory is tooled up for one model on a mass production basis and you are turning out thousands of them. Then your salesmen tell you that you've got to add another gadget or your competitors are going to put you out of business. Which is easier retooling your plant or adding another little shop where the gadget can be installed on the mass-production stoves be-fore they meet the competition? "That's the basic function of all our modification centers. We add, subtract, and change to meet and beat our competition-the Axis. We can take production airplanes and fit them for Arctic or desert operation, increase their range or build up their bomb loads."

Although exact locations of the modification centers are military secrets, it can be revealed that they are spotted on direct routes between the aircraft factories and battlefront destination of the planes, and that they are placed well back from the coasts.

The centers service both Army and Navy planes. A B-26 medium bomber, re-fitted as a torpedo plane, is an example of the type of work done.

General Jimmy Doolittle's Tokyo raiders were equipped for their special mission at the centers, as were the American bombers that rained havoc on the Roumanian oil fields last spring. A majority of the aircraft now being used against the Axis in the Solomons, New Guinea, China, the Aleutians, and North Africa are modification jobs. The Japa-Africa are modification jobs. The Japanese met disaster from modified fighters and bombers at Midway.

Modification centers have been in operation since shortly after Pearl Harbor but until recently the lid has been tight on every aspect of their work. Accordon every aspect of their work. According to the Army Air Forces, "When we make modifications, we want to catch the enemy totally unprepared. If the Japa nese had known that we were preparing the types of planes we used against them at Midway, they would have known we were laying for them." American modification centers were preceded by a similar system tested and preceded by a similar system tested and developed by the British. In the early part of the war some of the planes shipped from this country were not suitable for operation in the European theatre until the RAF had made necessary modifica-

Outmoded American pursuit craft, adapted to desert warfare, appeared in Libya and Egypt as highly effective straf-ing and light bombing planes.

In this country the modification technique underwent a successful test even before the Japanese had completed their conquest of the Philippines. The early Flying Fortresses with which the Japanese had complete their conquest of the Philippines. Flying Fortresses with which the Japanese had to cope lacked tail guns. Several of the big bombers were brought down because of this "blind spot." Japanese pilots learned to count on it.

But harried American pilots demanded tail guns, and got them in the B-17-E Fortress. Nearly 100 Zeros were downed before Japanese pilots learned that the old safe blind spot had begun to hammer out death.

The B-17-E was a factory modification, The B-17-E was a factory modification, requiring some 900 changes. However, modification centers are every day making similar changes, though not on such a large scale. These are incorporated in later production models.

When enough of such changes pile up to warrant inclusion in production planes, preparations are made to alter the design at the factory. Retooling and conversion of manufacturing methods are rendied at the factory without interrupt-ing production. In this operation such perfection has been reached that changeover has been made without loss of one working hour on the assembly line.

However, modification centers do not cease operating when basic designs are altered. They continue as before, incor-porating up-to-the-minute improvements porating up-to-the-minute improvements in fighting craft without interrupting the flow of production from the factories. They are constantly fitting production planes for emergency missions and con-ditions prevailing in specific theatres of the war

War Department officials declare that WHE DEPARTMENT OFFICIALS declare that in size and scope the system is growing. As one example, a new $12,000,000 modi-fication center is now under construction somewhere in Alabama.

Proposed Higher Rank Bills

The Retired Officers Association has drafted and expects to have introduced into Congress shortly two measures pro-viding higher rank for service officers under certain conditions.

One bill is similar to the World War rank act of 1930, and provides that all commissioned, chief warrant and warrant officers of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps or Coast Guard who serve on active duty any time after 7 Dec. 1941 until the end of the war shall upon retirement be advanced to the highest rank held during

Like the World War bill, no additional pay would be conferred by the act.

The second bill provides for the promotion after stated periods of service of retired officers who have performed ac-tive duty during the war.

The bill states that "retired commis-sioned officers" who "have performed active duty at any time since 6 Dec. 1941 or who are now serving on active duty and who are below the grade of colonel, shall who are below the grade of colonel, shall be permanently promoted on the retired list as hereinafter prescribed." It is provided that second lieutenants shall advance to first lieutenant after three years' service, first lieutenants to captain after 10, captains to major after 17, majors to lieutenant colonel after 22 and lieutenants. lieutenant colonel after 23, and lieuten ant colonels to colonel after 28 years

Non-promotion list officers would advance in accordance with the service requirements of their branches.

All time credited for pay purposes would be counted in determining the above service, but the following minim active federal duty would have to be re-dered: Second lieutenant to first lieuten ant, 3 years; first lieutenant to captain Tyears; captain to major, 12 years; major to lieutenant colonel, 20 years, and lieutenant colonel, 26 years.

wartime rank bill was introduced the 77th Congress but not acted upon, War Department feeling that legislation should await the end of the

However, the President of the Retired Officers Asociation, Col. A. T. Mariz, USMC-Ret., declared: "I think that this should be done now instead of waiting long after the war is over, since in that case many officers will have died."

Madang: An Allied heavy unit bombed the airdrome.

Finschhafen: An Allied heavy unit bombed the wharf and town area.

Lae: Two large formations of our medium bombers and long-range fighters attacked the enemy supply dumps and installations. An enemy fighter, caught on the ground, was destroyed, and piles of supplies were raked with cannon and machine-gun fire. Two buildings, hit by bombs, exploded and burned. Many fires were started in the area and were visible from a distance of twenty-five miles.

Mubo: Our attack planes bombed and strafed the trail to Komiatum, causing heavy damage in the latter village. Patrol skirmishes by our ground forces have resulted in an additional forty enemy ensualties.

Sanananda: Quickly following the success of Sunday, our ground forces seized Cape Killerton and Wye Point, destroying the defending enemy troops. General liquidation of positions continues.

Another communique—In a continuation of the aggressive action which started Sunday, 17 Jan., Sanananda Village and Sanananda Point were captured yesterday and our forward elements reached Giruwa.

On the coast the enemy is restricted in a small pocket 500 yards northwest of the motor road terminal in the area between Giruwa and Tarakena. Inland, two enemy pockets are under attack.

Financial Digest

There is continuing confirmation of the purpose of Congress to express its independence of the Executive. In spite of pressure applied by the Administration, House Democrats refused to permit the assignment of Representative Marcantonic of New York to the Judiciary Comtonio, of New York, to the Judiciary Comtonio, of New York, to the Judiciary Com-mittee. Southern Democrats were espe-cially up in arms. They declared that Marcantonio was a Communist, and that they did not propose to pay the Presithey did not propose to pay the President's debt to the American Labor Party by giving the New Yorker the important Committee membership he desired. This overwhelming refusal to heed the President's wish is significant because it demdent's wish is significant because it demonstrates that he cannot count upon the backing of many Representatives in matters of more vital concern to the country, as he has been able to do in the

One of these matters, which is certain to precipitate a battle, is the Social Security program, announced by Secretary of Labor Perkins in New York, which carries out the President's proposal in his Annual Message to Congress to enact a law which will assure the people from economic hazards "from the cradle to the economic hazards "from the cradle to the grave." The program, according to Miss Perkins, will represent a comprehensive, contributory social insurance system which, at the outset, would be financed by 10 per cent of payrolls shared equally by employees and employers. Eventually, government contributions would be necessary. Beneficiaries of the system would be agricultural workers, professional perbe agricultural workers, professional peo-ple, and self-employed, who are not now provided for by existing law. According to Miss Perkins there will be larger scope and duration of benefits, protection against disability and provision for hospital facilities, maternity, funeral and other payments, and improvement of the public assistance systems in the various states. She further insisted that the benefits proposed would be of more advantage to soldiers and sailors than vantage to soldiers and sailors than bonuses after the war. Congress is ex-pected to analyze the Perkins' program carefully, and especially to take into con-sideration the increase in taxation it

"Commander-in-Chief." the President called upon the striking anthracite coal miners in Pennsylvania to return to work, and his action was supplemented by appeals from John I. Lewis and other officials of the United Mine Workers' Union. There are threats that the miners still holding out will be deprived of their union membership, which would mean they would be unable to get work. Reports are current that the President may or-der the Army to seize and operate the mines, but this is discounted in view of the efforts he always has made in the past to conciliate labor. The effect of the strike, ostensibly against an increase in Union dues, but really for an increase in wages, has been to promote the sentiment in Congress for legislation which will sharply curtail the great privileges Labor

Merchant Marine

What to do when ship-wrecked? Many seamen cast adrift for days in open boats or rafts when their ships were sunk learned it the hard way, or, not learn-

From the stories told by these survivors and from other lore, the Coast Guard's Bureau of Marine Inspection has compiled a book now on the presses which it will issue to every officer and man in the American merchant marine. Seamen will be urged to keep it as close to them at all times as their life preservers, and consideration is being given to making it a required item to be stowed

In every lifeboat.

The book is a conglomeration of suggestions about equipment to carry and of information on what to do in an open to improvise shelters, and the like.

Some suggested items of equipment

some suggested items of equipment sound trivial, but they can mean the dif-ference between life and death to men in a ship's boat. Police whistles, for ex-ample, are carried on the person of sea-men, since they can be blown in fog or men, since they can be blown in Tog or darkness to aid rescuers in locating sur-vivors. But metal whistles won't do in cold weather as any boy who has suc-cumbed to a "dare" to place his tongue on a cold rail can testify. The mouth-pleces must be of plastics.

Two metal mirrors, pierced with holes, are suggested. Not to help a castaway crew to "pretty up," but because a group of survivors found that they made good signalling devices. The hole enables the mirror to be aimed so that the reflections will reach the observed craft. Ships or planes as far as ten miles away can be signalled by such a mirror.

Not exactly a part of a boat's equipment is the equipping of American ships' engine and boiler rooms with chain or wire ladders. Survivors have reported wire ladders. Survivors have reporte that many a black gang was trapped be low decks because the shock of a torpedo hit has wrenched loose the rigid ladders which provided the only means of reach ing topside.

Compasses are a part of the equipment of each ship's boat. The new book warns seamen to hold these well above the hull when using to prevent deflection by the metal bulls and keels.

Fishing equipment is also now required in each boat. The outfit first prescribed (previously reported in this paper) will the discarded however as being too heavy and a substitute outfit, sealed in a tin, consists of lines, leaders, hooks and gigs (plugs) in seven sizes. Since many a fish is lost at the side of a boat, a folding dip net is included. Also, luxury of luxuries gloves and apron.

The book tells the seamen how to eat his fish once it's caught; tells him which types are edible, and which parts; tells him how valuable raw fish are in quenching thrist. Similar data is provided for birds, which some survivors have report-ed even landed on their heads. Here the dip net may come in handy. A turtle can be a real windfall, and the book tells how to catch him and prepare him.

Men are advised to eat their rations slowly and a little at a time, not only for health's sake, but to dispel monotony. Most seamen know that sea water is poisonous, but many castaways have neglected to take advantage of rainfalls to augment their water supply. After col-lecting the downfall in a tarpaulin, they have found it polluted from the salt en-crustations on the canvas. Rinsing off crustations on the canvas. Rinsing off with the first water collected is urged, though it seems a waste of precious fluid.

Suggestions to aid in maintaining health and morale are included in the comprehensive book

U. S. COAST GUARD

DR. Arnaud Cartwright Marts, executive director of the State Council of Defense of Pennsylvania since its organization in April, 1941, and a former President of Bucknell University, has been named by Vice Adm. R. R. Waesche, Commandant of the Coast Guard, to head the civilian volunteers who will help guard waterfront facilties in the United States.

The experimental plan of forming a group of civilians into a Coast Guard Port Security Regiment was originated in Philadelphia and met with success. As a result, a similar plan of operations will be put into effect in other cities.

Willing and responsible citizens who are ineligible for armed services, but are anxious to share in the war effort, will be used. They will devote two six-hour periods a week to Captain of the Port duty. In addition, they receive special training. While on duty, these men wear training. While on duty, these men weat the Coast Guard uniform and are subject to military discipline. They are tempo-rary members of the Coast Guard Re-serve, but receive no pay.

Emergency Surgery on Cutter

An emergency appendectomy performed while a 100-mile-an-hour, North Atlantic gale lashed and tore at the U. S. Coast Guard cutter in which he was serving recently saved the life of Ens. Kenneth B. Nelson, USCG.

The doctor who calmly and skilfully operated upon the young Coast Guardsman is Lt. (jg) Paul W. Lucas, a United States Public Health Service doctor serving with the Coast Guard.

Coast Guard in Solomons
Discarding his souvenir blanket, salvaged from the effects of retreating Japanese, in favor of a quick dive into a fox hole just before the enemy opened up with one of their heaviest blasts of artil-lery fire, Coast Guardsman James D. Fox, MM1c. lived to count 72 shell holes in his tent. One shell had ripped through the blanket.

Fox, a member of the Coast Guard group which participated in the original landing operations on Guadalcanal, is now home on leave—with his blanket, a suitcase full of other Japanese trophies and a number of tales of his harrowing experiences during the early stages of the invasion. With other Coast Guardsmen Fox landed American forces from the transports and unloaded supplies as they came through later.

Highly praising the heroism of his fellow Coast Guardsmen, Fox recalled how Albert DePasquale, F2c, single-handedly manned a tank lighter, successfully doing the work of four men under heavy enemy fire.

Fox lauded the Coast Guard repair crews who worked at top pitch under constant enemy fire to keep their craft in running condition. One of these, Charles H. Barker, MM Lcl, worked day and night during the first three weeks of the landing operations. Becoming ill, he was removed to undergo a surgical operation. Inside of a month he was back on the job with enemy shells whistling all around, until he was again ordered to submit to further medical treatment.

Air Training

Under the expanded Army Air Forces training program the name "CPT" (Civilian Pilot Training) has been changed to "CAA War Training Service." The revised training schedule will be separated into two divisions.

In the first division training will be given, by a continuation of the series of courses now in operation, to men who will eventually qualify as transport pilots and instructors. Sufficient candidates are either now already in training, or are enrolled and awaiting call, to meet the re-quirements of this division for approximately the next year. Generally speaking these men are not eligible, for physical or other reasons, to serve as combat pilots. They will receive without charge tuition, subsistence and quarters.

In the second division new special qualification courses will be conducted for a certain proportion of prospective aviation cadets prior to their entry into the regular AAF schools. The number will depend on the amount of equipment available. At the present time a large number of these men are in the Army Enlisted Reserve, awaiting call to active duty. It Reserve, awaiting call to active duty, It is expected that these men will be called in the near future and assigned to approximately 100 colleges selected throughout the country in localities where flying fields are conveniently available. At these colleges the men will receive a course of study and training under the direction of AAF officers. This course will be supple-AAF officers. This course will be supplemented in its latter part by not to exceed 10 hours flying instruction by the CAA War Training Service to the extent that facilities permit. Men who are found unqualified for additional flying training will be eliminated as pilot trainees and will be used in other conceptions by the will be used in other capacities by the Army Air Forces. In this way the per-centage of cadets eliminated in the regular AAF schools should be reduced, and the work at these schools benefited. The college courses in the second division are scheduled to commence in April.

Army Specialized Training

The Army Specialized Training Pro-The Army Specialized Training Program in colleges and universities of the country will provide technical instruction for approximately 150,000 young soldiers each year, Brig. Gen. Joe N. Dalton, Assistant Chief of Staff for Personnel, Services of Supply, told members of the Knoxyille Junior Chamber of Commerce at a Civic Recognition Luncheon at the Andrew Johnson Hotel, Knoxville, Tenn., 19 Jan 1943.

"These men, who must be under 22 years of age, will spend from 12 to 48 years of age, will spend from 12 to 48 weeks in classrooms, laboratories and study halls preparing for special duties in such services as the Air Forces, Corps of Engineers, Medical Department, Chemical Warfare, Signal Corps and the Adjutant General's Division."

General Dalton said that the basic study course in the program would in-clude history, geography, English, mathematics, physics and chemistry. He said that each trainee would be required to devote 24 hours each week to classroom work and an equal amount of time to su-rvised study. "While in the classroom the soldierstudent will be wholly under the direction of his professor. If he does not maintain performance standards, he will find himself back in the ranks of the Army. At the end of each 12-weeks' term he must pass certain examinations. Should he fall below established averages and should he have no valid excuse, he will be disqualifled for further participation.

"In this program each trainee is a seventh grade private, drawing $50 a month. His official status is no different than any other soldier of the same rank He's not a college boy in uniform: he's a doughboy in a military unit located at a college. Because of his age and because he is the graduate of an accredited high school, he is given opportunity to apply his talents along technical or professional lines so that he may be more valuable to the Army.

"This program is not designed to offer a nice, soft spot for young men who have been inducted into the service."

Cairo Red Cross

Cairo-Lt. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, Cairo—Lt. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, Commanding General, United States Army Forces in the Middle East, accompanied by Staff Officers, attended the opening of the American Red Cross Club of Cairo 23 Dec. After a complete tour of the premises, General Andrews was a guest of the club at a tea arranged for himself, His Excellency Mohamed Shahin Pasha Governor of Cairo and Mai. Gen. Pasha, Governor of Cairo, and Maj. Gen. W. W. Richards of the British Army.

Following tea, the General, his party and other guests were escorted to the Roof Garden where a special program had been arranged for the enjoyment of all. Following the playing of the American National Anthem by the orchestra, and the invocation given by Colonel Morison, Senior Chaplain of the Delta Service Command, Mr. Ralph Bayne, Director of Operations of the American Red Cross in the Middle East, introduced General Andrews to the assemblage of guests.

General Andrews expressed his satisfaction on the splendid job that had been done by those in charge of preparing the club for use. He voiced gratification that the men of the U. S. Forces in this area now had available to them a center where they would find adequate lodgings, refreshment, and recreation in an atmos-phere of familiar American comradeship whenever they were afforded the opportunity of visiting Cairo.

After General Andrews had concluded, the guests were entertained with Christ-mas carols sung by a girls' chorus from St. Clair's College, Heliopolis, after which His Excellency Mohamed Shahin Pasha and General Richards were introduced.

Director Bayne then called upon Private Charles Jordan, assigned to a Mili-tary Police Battalion situated in the vicinity of Cairo, and Private Jordan, on behalf of the service men, expressed appreciation that the extensive facilities of the club had been provided for American soldiers here through the generosity of the American people and the foresight and thoughtfulness of the Army Command and the American Red Cross,
